Class Summary

- This course is more advance compared to “Learn English with Movies” in the Spring semester. Asian films, which languages used in these films are not necessarily English are used as teaching and learning materials in this course. However, discussions about the cinematic aspect as well as cultural, political, social, context of the films will be conducted mainly in English. Apart from group discussions, students are also encouraged to ask questions about the films to the instructor. Students will also need to submit a short report after watching each film.

Attainment Targets

- Students will be able to watch Asian films (Japanese, Chinese, Korean etc,) in this course which they are probably less familiar with and able to understand the sociopolitical and cultural background of the films.
- Students should be able to share their thoughts about the film they watched verbally and written.
